as we see it

□ Is network news biased?

When "The News Twisters," Edith Efron's popular study of alleged network news bias, was first published, the book was attacked by some critics as being conservatively slanted.

Miss Efron had taped all network evening newscasts for the seven weeks preceding the 1968 election and had assigned "favorable" or "unfavorable" labels to words and phrases used by newscasters in their reports on the Presidential candidates.

□ Recently the American Institute for Political Communications found from a study early this summer of network newscasts for 10 days that there was "a significant amount of bias" in their reporting of the Democratic Presidential aspirants and the Vietnam war, even though "the great bulk" of the newscasts were objective.

The Institute assigned five recent college graduates—all of whom favored Sen. George McGovern's candidacy and all of whom opposed the Administration's Vietnam policy—to view network newscasts. It was these viewers who reported alleged "episodes of bias" in the 10-day period. (A segment was judged to be biased only if at least three of the five viewers agreed.) The bias they reported was pro-McGovern and against the Nixon Vietnam policy.

□ This report could hardly be criticized on the basis of being "conservatively slanted," as Miss Efron's study was. CBS had the most heated reaction to the Efron study. ABC and NBC attacked the Institute report, ABC because the study was made over a brief period when Senator McGovern was emerging as the front-runner, NBC because there was no specific definition of bias.

□ Is network news biased? Maybe so. But it's obvious that during the Presidential campaign a great many viewers will be watching carefully for any indication of bias.

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS

ELVIS PRESLEY arrives on NBC sometime early next year, but the rest of the world will be seeing him first. NBC will tape his Jan. 14 Hawaiian concert for a later special, but it'll be telecast live via satellite to Australia, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand and South Vietnam--and the next night it will be telecast in 28 European countries . . . Nepotism Dept. (continued): JOHN CARRADINE and ROBERT CARRADINE (second-youngest of John's six sons) join DAVID CARRADINE, the second-eldest, in "Dark Angel," an episode of Kung Fu on ABC . . . And LAURENCE LUCKINBILL's wife, ROBIN STRASSER--formerly of Another World--plays his girl friend in a Delphi Bureau episode.

CARROLL O'CONNOR will receive the Communicator Award of the Catholic Press Council of Southern California . . . ROBERT YOUNG plays the father of four daughters in the Movie of the Week "All My Darling Daughters." He's a judge, though, not a doctor, and it's a light comedy, not a drama, but Young is perfect for the role. He has four daughters in real life . . . A two-hour TV movie based on BILL DAVIDSON's book, "Indict and Convict," stars GEORGE GRIZZARD as a trial attorney. It's produced by DAVID VICTOR, creator of Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law.

BILL BIXBY and BRANDON CRUZ, formerly inseparable in The Courtship of Eddie's Father, have gone their separate ways. Usually lovable Bill plays a villain in the "Consortium" segment of Search with HUGH O'BRIAN, and Brandon plays an orphan in Kung Fu . . . Eighteen-year-old BARRY LIVINGSTON, formerly of My Three Sons and The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet, can't break his kid-part mold. He will be Linus in "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown," the Hall of Fame Valentine special on NBC . . . BURT REYNOLDS will be fully clothed for a guest shot with FLIP WILSON--as (it is devoutly to be wished) will TIM CONWAY on the same show.

DAVID CASSIDY is taping an ABC documentary, "David Cassidy Around-London" . . . ANN B. DAVIS has been signed for the PATSY KELLY role in the national company of "No, No, Nanette," which goes on tour after The Brady Bunch stops production . . . JANE ACTMAN, who plays a daughter on The Paul Lynde Show, moves over to Room 222 for one appearance . . . JOHN SAXON becomes a tough big-time bandleader in a Banyon episode. He may even sing . . . The Bell System Family Theatre marks the 32nd year of broadcasting--radio and TV--for Ma Bell with an adaptation of JOHN STEINBECK's "The Red Pony," starring HENRY FONDA, MAUREEN O'HARA and GILBERT ROLAND on March 18.

PUBLIC BROADCASTING MUST CLEAN HOUSE

A critic of its personnel and its practices proposes sweeping reforms

By Dr. John C. Schwarzwald

[Dr. John C. Schwarzwald, executive vice president of KCTA, the public-TV station in Minneapolis-St. Paul, has long been critical of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.]

President Nixon's recent veto of a bill which would have appropriated $155-million to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting has caused considerable comment and much bitter argument. One would think from reading some editorials and listening to a number of public-television spokesmen that this was a totally unforeseen event and that it was done without warning and without cause.

The truth is that everyone in public or educational broadcasting should have known the veto was coming, for the very good reason that the veto was not only justified but necessary. Indeed, the President would have been derelict in his responsibility had he not vetoed the bill. The story behind these events is somewhat complicated but is tremendously important to all of us.

It will be remembered that in 1967 the Congress, at the urging of many prominent citizens and after a comprehensive report financed by the Carnegie Foundation, passed a bill authorizing the creation of an entity to be known as the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB). This nonprofit organization was to use its funds for the promotion of public (noncommercial, educational) broadcasting. The bulk of CPB funds were appropriated by the Congress, although CPB received considerable additional amounts from the Ford Foundation, the Columbia Broadcasting System and others. CPB hired John Macy, former director of the Civil Service Commission, as its chief executive. An organization called the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) was hastily created which would serve as the operating agency for the distribution of programs and approval of the major funds for the production of such programs. Hartford Gunn, station manager of WGBH-TV in Boston, was hired as president of PBS.

CPB and PBS then proceeded to give production contracts to a small number of noncommercial stations in New York, Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The biggest single grants have gone to WNET in New York, which absorbed the old NET operation. The rest of the more than 200 stations got very few production grants or none at all.

The programs which were produced by the favored stations included a high percentage of so-called public-affairs programs, and it was with some of these that the trouble in PTV began.

A number of station managers protested to CPB and PBS the fact that many of the public-affairs programs they were expected to run on their stations seemed to be skewed to the views expressed publicly by Fred Friendly of the Ford Foundation and his superiors. Those managers who believed that an impartial or balanced presentation of controversial issues was essential when public airways and public funds were used were told that they simply did not understand the true nature of public broadcasting.

A program produced by the New York PTV station called "Banks and the Poor" used statements by David Rockefeller in such a highly edited manner that his point of view was by no means fairly presented. This caused widespread and unfavorable repercussions throughout the educational community as well as in business and government. Another documentary entitled "Who Invited US" probably holds the all-time record for one-sided political presentation. At least it holds the record on this side of the Iron Curtain.

Another widely heralded NET program about the FBI finally had to be withdrawn by PBS because of an outrageous lack of documentation. PBS, in its turn, was then roundly denounced by New York PTV officials for "yielding to Administration pressure." Less than a year ago the comedian Woody Allen produced a lengthy program segment for the New York PTV station devoted solely to ridiculing Mr. Nixon and his Administration. [The show was never broadcast.—Ed.] Even more recently another widely advertised program featured Pete Seeger's sister in a one-sided diatribe against the United States in which she expressed the reasons why she felt she could not live in America and had given up her American citizenship. Dozens of other similar examples of PBS programs could be cited.

In the face of this one-sided approach to public affairs many people in the Administration, as well as many members of Congress, and at least 40 PTV station managers, simply do not believe that PBS and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting are at all interested in presenting balanced public-affairs programming. Both Republican and Democratic officials have reluctantly come to the belief that a number of CPB employees see their mission as one of providing to an important segment of the American public an extreme left-wing view of both domestic politics and our international dealings. Many CPB and PBS employees think it perfectly permissible, even desirable, to use public funds for this purpose. The President and several hundred senators and congressmen do not agree, as shown by recent Congressional votes.

CPB and PBS spokesmen like to point out that the two-year authorization for CPB passed both houses by overwhelming margins before the Presidential veto. What they are less ready to point out is that on the operative amendments which would have limited → the authorization to one year (thus retaining some possibility of annual review) the margin in the House of Representatives was exactly four votes. In spite of much brave talk about overriding the President's veto, this proved to be completely impossible. Moreover, public support for the CPB position was, at best, scanty. In this connection a recent Educational Broadcasting Newsletter stated "... substantial public outcry in support of public broadcasting has not materialized." Under the circumstances it is obvious that if noncommercial broadcasting is ever to receive the kinds of public funding which will allow it to serve the American people adequately, certain changes will have to be made quickly.

First, those who were in charge of public broadcasting during the time when these events took place will have to be replaced. This means that Macy and Gunn will have to resign, and it might be desirable for certain members of the Boards of Directors of both CPB and PBS to resign at the same time.* The Administration—and for that matter, many, many Democrats—have simply lost confidence in the ability of these people to produce and distribute balanced programming on public affairs. While such confidence is lacking, neither the Congress nor the Administration is likely to authorize more than a one-year appropriation for minimal funding.

Next, the program philosophy of the CPB will have to be changed. The new philosophy will have to be one subscribing to John Milton's rhetorical "Whoever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter?" CPB and PBS will have to make sure hereafter that the fight is, in fact, fair and equal. They will have to maintain this impartial posture for a number of years before any national administration will recover confidence in their activities. This means, of course, that the New York PTV station and the Ford Foundation must be stripped of the influence they have previously enjoyed at PBS.

Third, since the Congress and the Administration, like most Americans, believe in education, that aspect of non-commercial television must be strengthened. The Carnegie Commission did not deal directly with the educational uses of television but stated its belief in the high importance of such use. CPB and PBS will have to come to a realization that most Congressmen believe that television can be used to improve the quality of education and that it can offer education of the highest quality to an enormous number of people who desperately need education at this level. Only when the directors of CPB and PBS prove that they sincerely believe this and that they want to use technology for the delivery of high-quality education to all our people will they reacquire the public confidence which their present leaders have so foolishly dissipated. And with regained confidence they will finally receive adequate funding.

Fourth, PBS and CPB will have to give up some of the technical tricks which they now use to force stations to use certain programs, even though the stations might wish to avoid such usage. For example, it is common PBS practice to advertise a program which features highly popular performers in the local press. Then, before such performers appear on the program, an ideological message is delivered by someone else. A recent example of this was a program on which the Mills Brothers were to appear (and eventually did) but which was preceded by the diatribe from Pete Seeger's sister. Another example of these practices is PBS's habit of announcing the appearance of a popular politician running for office and to leave the station the choice of either not running that politician's views or of picking up the tab for presenting the views of all opposing candidates. Another PBS method is to institute a letter-writing campaign designed to harass a station's board of trustees into acceptance of programs which would otherwise be rejected as biased and unbalanced. All of these little tricks (and many others) will have to be eschewed if trust is to be re-established.

Finally, new policies must be formulated by which at least two-thirds of the Federal dollars appropriated will go directly to the stations. During the first three years of CPB only about 10 per cent of the funds went to the stations. Meantime, the stations must be free to exercise complete control over Federally funded broadcast programs, including the right to omit segments of such programs whenever they think the public interest demands such omission. It would also be helpful if production of programs were funded on a nation-wide basis, rather than confined to a few privileged stations, and that PBS and CPB, which have maintained large duplicative staffs, should begin to practice economy so that stations might receive more funds for local programs.

For the immediate future the educational television community should accept Mr. Nixon's generous offer of a one-year extension for $45-or-$50 million and should then build upon this foundation a structure which, unlike what we now have, would be dedicated to educational use of the medium and impartial balance in terms of public-affairs programming.

Failure to do this means that public television will cease to grow and the dream which so many of us have fought for so long will perish. None of us can afford to let this happen. (END)

You bought it for one good reason. Now we'll give you four more.

There are lots of good reasons for drinking Sunsweet® Prune Juice, besides the obvious one.

1. Nourishment. Sunsweet contains more iron than orange juice. We especially recommend it for women because they require more iron than men. We also recommend it to teenagers as a refreshing substitute for excessive sweets.

2. Versatility. Many dishes are enhanced when you add Sunsweet Prune Juice. For instance, make a Prune Nog by mixing one cup of chilled Sunsweet with one-quarter cup non-fat dry milk solids. Stir together, add an egg, beat until frothy and garnish with nutmeg. Delicious!

3. Energy. Sunsweet can give you an energy lift. It contains more natural food energy (calories) than orange, grapefruit, tomato or pineapple juice.

4. Flavor. Sunsweet is a naturally delicious fruit juice so even kids go for it.

Do you need better reasons for enjoying ice-cold Sunsweet every morning?

Chassis tubes are a major cause of TV repairs. So RCA presents more than 50 models without a single chassis tube.

Tubes get hot and weaken with age. RCA XL-100s don't have chassis tube problems because they don't have chassis tubes. XL-100s are 100% solid state. Most set functions are controlled by RCA's 12 plug-in AccuCircuits. They're solid state—designed to keep cool, last longer, and be easy to service. Solid state color is the most advanced you can get. And RCA is a specialist in solid state color TV. RCA builds more, sells more, offers more models than anyone in America. And they're all backed with...

A stronger guarantee because...

1. You get a full year on parts (picture tube—2 years) and labor. Most other color TV models are not 100% solid state—and give you only 90 days on labor.
  2. You choose any serviceman you want. Most other warranties limit you to an authorized list.
  3. RCA encourages your serviceman to do his best work by paying him at his going rate. Most others set a maximum payment.
- Simple automatic tuning.

RCA XL-100s have a fiddle-free tuning system—with a flexibility feature most other sets don't have. RCA's AccuMatic color monitor makes it simple to custom tune color to your individual preference...

and keep it that way.

XL-100s are 100% brighter than our comparable sets of 3 years ago. Every console and table model has RCA's black matrix picture tube. You get the kind of sharp, vivid color you'd expect from the people who pioneered color TV.

Your XL-100 guarantee.

Here are the basic provisions: If anything goes wrong with your new XL-100 within a year from the day you buy it—and it's our fault—we'll pay to have it fixed. This includes regular labor charges plus parts (new or, at our option, rebuilt). Use any service shop in which you have confidence—no need to pick from an authorized list. If your set is a portable, you take it in for service. For larger sets, a serviceman will come to your home. Present the warranty registration your dealer provided when you bought your set, and RCA will pay the repair bill. If the picture tube becomes defective during the first two years, we will exchange it for a rebuilt tube. (We pay for installation during the first year—you pay for it in the second year.) RCA "Purchaser Satisfaction" warranty covers every set defect. It doesn't cover installation, foreign use, antenna systems or adjustment of customer controls.

XL-100 model GR-802. "Royaltan" (25" diagonal). Simulated tv reception

Color you can count on.

Cameraperson in Hot Pants

By Joseph Finnigan

James Wong Howe, the Academy-Award-winning filmmaker, is doubtless one of Hollywood's greatest cameramen, but he's by no means the prettiest. As of now, that title could well be claimed by Diane Biederbeck, a 25-year-old honey-blond cameraman for KABC-TV in Los Angeles.

Diane, who wears hot pants while working because they "show my legs off to those movie stars," has all the attributes required of a camera operator, and quite a few that aren't. The latter include measurements of 36-24-35½.

The daughter of a Boston printer, she was first exposed to a TV camera at Chelmsford High School, which had, of all things, a closed-circuit TV station. She took a production course that resulted in a succession of camera-assistant and film-cutting jobs on local Boston UHF stations. Three years ago, she took off for Los Angeles because, she says, "I figured I'd gone about as far as I could go in Boston." She got lucky and managed to find temporary fill-in work on several Los Angeles stations until making a more permanent (she hopes) connection at KABC earlier this year.

Recently we had lunch at a Sunset Boulevard pub called the Cock 'n Bull, and, as if to prove she can do almost anything as well as a man, she ate a meal of potato-and-leek soup, cold duck, pepper steak, beef-and-kidney pie, stewed tomatoes, macaroni and cheese, a bottle of beer and some cheese cake. Me and my little plate of cold duck watched in awe.

"Been eating like that long?" I asked, eyeing her good figure. "All my life," she replied breezily. "I seem to burn it all off. Moving that heavy equipment, I guess. Or running away from all those men. I'm not sure which."

Between bites, Diane told me about her career. As a member of KABC's early-morning-news camera crew, Diane gets up at 4 A.M. and arrives at the Hollywood studio from her Glendale apartment at 5:30.

All of which puts a crimp in the social life she shares with her boy friend, a computer engineer. However, there are compensations. The pay is good, ranging from $182 to $320 a week. And there are those times when Diane runs the camera at press conferences for big stars.

She recalls that "Bob Hope said I looked like his psychiatrist, and I told him to see me if he had a problem. Gregory Peck caught me staring at him and said 'Hello,' which is pretty good for Gregory Peck. I've also met Charlton Heston, Tim Conway, Richard Benjamin and Bill Russell."

As one of the few female camerapersons in Hollywood, Diane is constantly asked her opinion of women's lib. To which she answers, "I feel the most important thing about women's lib is that if a girl shows a tendency to be a jackhammer operator, let her be a jackhammer operator. And if she wants to be a doctor, don't make her be a nurse." Had her mother subscribed to that philosophy, she might be driving a moving van instead of operating a camera, because "I had dolls when I was a little girl, but I liked trucks better."

Diane not only loves the job, she loves the city, particularly the easy opportunities it offers for concert and theater. The Hollywood Bowl is her bag.

Miss Biederbeck's invasion of the formerly all-male camera-crew domain met with some resistance. The first time she attended a union meeting at a school, the men thought she was there to attend a PTA meeting. "But," she adds, "I ended up on the executive board of that union."

"Actually, management never gave me a hassle. It was the guys I worked with. At first they said, 'Wait'll she tries to move a camera.' I did that. They weigh 80 pounds, but you don't pick 'em up—you push 'em. Then they said, 'Wait'll she has to fly a camera.' That's lifting the camera off a pedestal and setting it into a rigging so it can be raised over the stage. They usually assign three guys to do that. So, they assigned two guys and me. We did it OK. Now they've run out of things to 'wait' for."

As for those occasions when the language gets rough, Diane is well-prepared—as almost anybody is these days. "Some guys will use the worst language imaginable," she says. "I've worked in five stations and there's always one fella who does that. Then he'll say, 'If you're gonna work with men, you'd better get used to this.' I just laugh and congratulate him on his wit."

But no matter how much opposition Diane faces, she seems quite capable of overcoming it. As she did during her early days at KABC when a veteran cameraman was openly resentful of her presence. When she found out that the man shared her political philosophy, Diane used it to her advantage. They're good friends now, she says, "and he calls me 'the soft fella'."

Which is something nobody ever called James Wong Howe. (END)

SHOWS YOU ALMOST SAW

By Dick Adler

"I firmly believe that people do respond to different things. I just wish I knew what they were."—Fred Silverman, CBS vice president in charge of programming, as quoted by Martin Mayer in his book "About Television."

By now, we've all had a chance to sample the annual autumn smorgasbord laid out for our delight by the television networks. Some of the dishes are new, some are old favorites with new sauces, some look new on the outside but, after a few bites, turn out to be made from last year's leftovers. We've seen Maude climbing out of her Bunker; we've waited (in vain) for Yul Brynner to break into song; we've watched Paul Lynde doing an expert impression of himself. In short, aside from better than usual movies and more alternating shows, it seems to be a season very much like any other: some good shows, some passable, and a few absolute clinkers that make us shake our heads in wonderment at what the people responsible had in mind.

Susan Hayward and Lee J. Cobb in 'Heat of Anger,' pilot film for Fitzgerald and Pride.

But what about the shows that didn't get on; all those pilots lurking in the wings, waiting for their big break? Last season (unlike past years, when they surfaced largely in network screening rooms) we at least had a chance to see most of the pilots on our home screens—as television movies or episodes of successful series or as parts of those three-in-one packages that popped up from time to time. Some of them got surprisingly high ratings, too; Call Her Mom, Adventures of Nick Carter, Heat of Anger and Fireball Forward were all among the year's top 10 made-for-TV films.

According to Sue Cameron, TV columnist for the Hollywood Reporter, the three networks between them made some 85 pilots last season, to fill the less than 20 new slots opened by departing shows. Forty were comedies (mostly situation), 22 were hard action dramas, the rest were legal, medical, thriller, musical variety and other generally acceptable forms. So the competition for the vacant slots was unusually fierce—especially since some of them (like Bill Cosby and Julie Andrews) were already committed going in, and at least one network had to find space for new shows whose producers had some prior claim because of leftover contracts on canceled programs.

To keep it all in some sort of perspective, and to give at least a small idea of how networks make up their minds when they choose new programs, here are the particulars of several new shows which you almost saw this season: projects which came very close to appearing on your home screens in place of some of the present occupants.

THIS WEEK IN NEMTIN Satire on television is so rare that perhaps some of the raves and howls that greeted This Week in Nemtin when it was first aired were elicited by the form rather than the content. It was virtually a 30-minute ethnic joke, done as a newscast from a mythical, slightly dumb country—with Alex Dreier as the anchor man, and the likes of Carl Reiner, Edward Asner and McLean Stevenson as leading Nemtiks—and was so well-received that CBS began to look favorably on it as a series. "There was a fantastic audience response," remembers Saul Turteltaub, who with partner Bernie Orenstein created Nemtin (they currently are in charge of The New Dick Van Dyke Show). "CBS has a rule that if telephone operators in any city get more than 25 calls after a show, they have to file a report. Nemtin got an amazing 60 calls in New York alone, all favorable, all from people who wanted to see it as a series.

"We were told that it was between us and Me and the Chimp to replace Sandy Duncan when she became ill," he continues. "We lost; so did Me and the Chimp. Then CBS said we wouldn't be in the fall line-up either; it was definitely the kind of show that should start in January rather than in September. When they say something like that, you tend to think it makes sense—God knows why. CBS has the right to it through October; then we can talk

But Turteltaub isn't particularly sanguine about Nemtin's chances at the other networks; he thinks syndication is its best bet. "Once a show gets on the air at one network and then isn't picked up," he explains, "you get all the noncreative business types at the other networks who say things like 'Well, it didn't work for CBS—they must know something.' When you come right down to it, God never created a network person. It's a person who happens to have a job at a network; he knows no more than you or I."

rectors of pilots in the business (his list of clicks includes That Girl, Funny Face, Love, American Style, Barefoot in the Park, The Odd Couple and The Partridge Family) had a bad time last season. He directed five pilots and struck out on all of them. But Wednesday Night Out, which aired as an NBC World Premiere with two other pilots called Keeping Up with the Joneses and Call Holme, has a good chance of becoming a midseason replacement should any NBC shows fall by the ratings wayside. It starred Jim Hutton, Pat Harrington and Gloria DeHaven in the story of four diverse couples who meet weekly at one another's homes for an evening of fun and bigotry.

"The best idea we had for the pilot," says Paris, "was one where the divorced woman brings as her date a guy who sells pornographic movies, and they wind up showing the movies at one of the houses. You never see the movies, of course—just everybody's reactions to them. NBC loved the script but were afraid to go with it as a pilot. So they chose a weaker story: the date gets sick, they send for a doctor who turns out to be a black lady. Who can get excited about that at this point in time?"

But the big reason for Wednesday Night Out's failure to make the fall schedules appears to have been a complete turnabout in network thinking. "At one point, NBC planned to have a 'Comedy Night,' with three or four new half-hour series back to back," says Doug Cramer, who produced Wednesday for Screen Gems. "Everybody at NBC in Burbank loved the show; it went to New York and we heard it was very well received there, too. It was even on the early schedules. I went out of town for a week to rest, because the selling season last year dragged on for an unusually long time—everybody was waiting for the FCC to rule on ABC's request for an extra half hour of prime time on Tuesday night, which was finally turned down—and when I got back, both the 'Comedy Night' and Wednesday Night Out had disappeared. But we're making a new pilot and recasting a couple of parts, and with any luck at all the show should be on in January."

THE GREAT DETECTIVES In place of ABC's new Thursday night anthology series The Men, you almost saw one called The Great Detectives—Robert Conrad as Nick Carter, Stewart Granger as Sherlock Holmes, Eve Arden as Hildegard Withers. All three scored well as television movies. So what went wrong?

"There was a tremendous excitement at ABC about the concept for the shows; they loved all the scripts, the movies turned out well—and we still didn't make it," says Frank Price, the Universal vice president in charge of the project. "First, ABC was bothered by the fact that the Hildegard Withers stories were contemporary—not period pieces like the other two. Then they began to worry about Sherlock Holmes, whether or not people would go for the English background.

"Nick Carter came the closest," he continues. "That almost made it as a series on its own, or as a rotating part of The Men. In the end, it was the period—New York at the turn of the century—that finally killed it."

One of the problems at ABC, as Price explains, was that a lot of the time available for new shows had been allotted even before the start of the big crap shoot on Sixth Avenue—that stretch of New York real estate where the networks have their headquarters. "Julie Andrews had her hour, The Streets of San Francisco had another hour, Screen Gems was in with its half-hour series," he says. "That made the odds incredibly high against new shows."

Fitzgerald and Pride, a spin-off of the TV movie "Heat of Anger," was a top contender at CBS for this season, a cry of restrained joy went up among those interested in bettering the lot of women in television. Writer Fay Kanin's characters were a mature female lawyer and a young man associate who operated on an equal level—no dizzy girl side-kick or comic wife, just two partners who happened to be of different sexes. Susan Hayward (who took over when Barbara Stanwyck became ill) and James Stacey played the parts, the reactions and ratings were solid.

"Our understanding is that it was a toss-up between Fitzgerald and Pride and The Waltons at CBS," says Chuck Fries of Metromedia, which made the film. "But everything we get is hearsay. This past season the networks across the board were much more conservative in giving out any information about their program decisions. Schedules kept being delayed, and anyone caught leaking information was threatened with terrible punishment. On shows that don't make it, it's always difficult to get information as to why. It's extremely hard for network executives to verbalize why something did or didn't happen. Many times they want to protect their internal decision-making policy. Let's suppose it was the chairman of the board who didn't like it for personal reasons—you're not going to get anybody to admit that."

FIREBALL FORWARD Sometimes the reason for a show not going on the air is as simple as an actor's desire not to be tied down. Fireball Forward is a perfect example of that.

Frank McCarthy, who produced "Patton," thought that a television movie and a subsequent series about a World War II command post had strong possibilities—especially with the availability of thousands of feet of battle sequences shot by 20th Century-Fox for "Patton" and "Tora! Tora! Tora!"

ABC went along with the idea, and Ben Gazzara was signed for the lead—a tough, unorthodox general who got deeply involved with his men.

"Ben went into the movie without an option on his services for a series," says McCarthy. "He loved the script but didn't want to be committed. Now, both Rock Hudson and Anthony Quinn had the same kind of arrangement—no options—when they made their television movies, but when the big money was dangled in front of them, they agreed to do the series. But no matter what we dangled, Ben wouldn't agree—and ABC just wouldn't do the series without him."

Does this mean that Fireball Forward is dead as a series? "I've sort of pushed it aside in my mind to pursue other things," admits McCarthy, who was a brigadier general himself in World War II. "But if I saw a gleam of interest somewhere else, I would certainly like to pursue it."

CALL HER MOM There's a rumor—unconfirmed—that the reason Call Her Mom (the story of a beautiful young woman who becomes a fraternity house-mother) didn't make it as an ABC series even though it was the highest rated of last season's crop of 90-minute pilots is that a top network executive just doesn't like Connie Stevens. "The ABC program-development people never really looked at it as a series," says producer Doug Cramer. "But CBS took 'The Homecoming'—which wasn't intended to be a pilot, just a television special—and made it into a series called The Waltons. You figure it out. As a producer, the biggest thing I learned from this past season is that there's never anything to be learned from any one season. I had six pilots; at one point it looked like at least four were sold; I wound up with one definite sale—Bridget Loves Bernie. But there's always January—not to mention next year." END

New Visalens wetting solution. It makes contacts easier on the eyes.

Very comfortable. That's new Visalens™ wetting solution. Here's why: (1) It wets better than water, because it converts your contact lens surface to a hydrophilic (water-loving) one. That means more comfort and clearer vision soon after insertion. (2) It grips the finger you apply with, but (3) repels finger smudging. (4) It gently cushions the insertion. (5) It coats the lens smoothly for several minutes, until your own tears take over. Very comfortable indeed.

(6) It does not clean your lens. Any really good cleaner is too strong for your eye. So we also offer a really good cleaner, the overnight solution for clear, clean lenses. Visalens Soaking/Cleaning Solution.

(7) One final comforting thought. Visalens is great for your eyes. We know quite a bit about eyes. What bothers them. What soothes them. After all, we at Pfizer Inc. developed Visine® eye drops. And we think you'll find Visalens wetting solution a real comfort to you. Try it.

What do you do when you find yourself

Face to face with Chou En-lai?

By Phil Johnson

Well, you swallow hard. And try to think fast. But mostly, you just stare.

There he was when we burst into a room in Peking, China—Chou En-lai, Premier of more than 750,000,000 Chinese. He's a little guy, slight and ramrod straight, but with the piercing eyes and cold mask of absolute authority we'd seen thousands of times on television and in magazines and newspapers. And he was staring at us.

We tried to apologize, to beg his pardon. Most of all, we tried to leave. But he cut off our escape.

He walked briskly to where we stood, stopping short directly in front of us. Then that hard mask broke into a semblance of a smile. He stuck out his hand. And in perfect English, he said "Ahhh, the press. Welcome. We're so happy to have you here."

And we shook hands. And I said something, I think, about being happy to be there.

It was that simple. And that fast.

Later, we had our picture taken with him . . . but I'm getting ahead of my story.

We had gone to China (photographer Jim Tolhurst and I) to cover the visit of House Majority Leader Hale Boggs of New Orleans and Minority Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan—and whatever else of China we could get to. We work for WWL-TV in New Orleans and we were the first non-network American TV newsmen to be admitted to the People's Republic of China in 22 years. But it took blood, sweat, tears and lots of Chinese-style patience before we were admitted. We wrote our first letter in April of 1971, on the day the American ping-pong team entered China. Our reasoning was logical—if they let in a whole ping-pong team, why not just two newsmen?

But the Chinese obviously didn't see it that way. They just didn't answer. So we wrote again in May . . . and in June . . . and July . . . and August. And in between letters we telephoned the Red Chinese Embassy in Ottawa and talked to a nice man named Mr. Yao. As politely as possible, he gave us the diplomatic equivalent of "Don't call us, we'll call you."

In September we flew off to Ottawa to make a personal pitch. We pressed the button at the Embassy. A thin Oriental voice came over the speaker: "What you want?" We explained who we were and could we please talk to Mr. Yao.

The speaker crackled again: "Mr. Yao not here. You go away." And we heard an ominous click.

I buzzed again. "What you want?" Another explanation.

"Mr. Yao not here. You go away. Come back next week." Click!

That did it. We buzzed again, and again, and again. No answer. Then, fully five minutes later, the same voice. "What you want?" And we dropped our diplomatic accent and shifted into good old Third Ward New Orleans basic. "Listen, man," we began, in just under a shout, "we just flew 1500 damn miles to get here and we're not about to go away. We told Mr. Yao yesterday we were coming. He knew we were coming. Now if he's not here, there must be somebody else we can talk to."

A pause . . . then only an Oriental "Hmmm." And we waited. Finally—click . . . "You come to 11th floor," the voice said. And we did.

We met there not Mr. Yao, but a Mr. Kao, second secretary of the Embassy. He was most polite, and listened very decently to our pitch. Then, at the end, we handed him copies of all the letters we had written and told him we had received no answers to any of them. He excused himself, went away for a moment, then returned with an explanation. "I would not worry," he said. "I am told that we have not opened the April mail yet."

Face was saved all around. We were not embarrassed because they had not really ignored our letters. And they were not embarrassed because they intended to get to them eventually.

We continued to write and to call. And nine months afterward, fully 14 months after we first began writing, we got the word. visas were waiting for us at the Embassy. Three days later we were on our way to China.

And from the moment we landed until we left 10 days later, the Chinese could not have been nicer to us. They provided us with a car and a driver, and with Yu Chung-Ching, a member of the Press and Information Office. He spoke excellent English, with a rather old-school British accent, and acted as our interpreter and guide. He also ran interference for us when we wanted to cover something not included in Congressman Boggs' schedule. We got most of what we asked for, thanks to Mr. Yu.

We photographed operations at the Third Teaching Hospital of Peking Medical College in which acupuncture was used as the only anesthetic. It was a startling experience. One 51-year-old woman, Mrs. Chao Yu Chen, had a thyroid tumor as big as a golf ball removed from her throat with only two acupuncture needles on either side of her neck as anesthesia. She talked with the nurses throughout the operation. Then, when it was completed, she sat up on the table, stood up, allowed us to interview her for five minutes, and walked away to her room.

And we'll always remember the little 10-year-old boy, Kuo Pei Ching, who, with only one needle stuck in his cheek, had a tooth pulled without a whimper.→

Meet the new Omega. Compact Olds— at a compact price.

It's a whole new kind of Olds. And the lowest-priced of all. Omega is a compact—but one with Olds big-car thinking built in. So it comes out looking more like a bigger Olds than a little compact, outside and inside. We think it's a lot of Olds for the money.

Built like a 1-1/2-ton brick. Omega is nearly 500 pounds more car than some smaller compacts. Its wheelbase is longer—111 inches. And you can feel the difference on the highway. It's strong. Solid. Surprisingly roomy and quiet.

The good stuff is standard. Our Omega gives you things you may have to pay extra for in some other compacts. Deluxe interior with new "wet-look" vinyl trim. Full carpeting. Vinyl-grip steering wheel. Chrome trim around the windows and wheel openings. And for power you get a husky 250-cubic-inch engine.

Your choice of 2, 3 or 4 doors. Omega is a 2-door coupe. A 3-door hatchback. Or a 4-door sedan. All very reasonably priced. Sure, you can get a smaller, lighter compact for less money—but it wouldn't be an Olds. And there's quite a difference. Oldsmobile. Always a step ahead.

Then, when it was over, he stood up and lustily sang a song praising Chairman Mao—two choruses.

The operation for the tumor, incidentally, including hospitalization, cost $2. The tooth extraction was on the house. The prices are low because the Chinese keep costs down. Doctors' salaries are $75 per month.

We moved around a lot. We went into people's homes as often as we could, to see how they lived. We sipped tea with Pan Shih Hsun in Manchuria. He's a rice farmer, member of the August 1st Commune. His income: $50 a month. He had a wife, three daughters and a son and owned his own home. Apparently, he was fairly well off because his two-room house had a radio and a sewing machine. And in the yard outside, he had three pigs and a flock of ducks.

His urban counterpart we met in Canton. He was Yu Shen Tien, and both he and his wife worked in a rubber factory, making tires. They, together with four children and a mother-in-law, lived in a three-bedroom apartment built for workers on the outskirts of the city. Rent was $5 per month. In the apartment, in addition to the usual picture of Chairman Mao, was a radio, two bicycles and a sewing machine—sure signs of affluence.

Yu's wife, Pan Gee Dee, told us that together they earn about $90 a month and only recently opened a bank account for their savings. Interest runs a little less than two per cent.

We visited these people in their homes and photographed their children in their schools. We were told of Chairman Mao and his miracles, and his thought, and his plans. But mostly we talked of everyday, ordinary things—of the soil and water, of rain or the lack of it, of children and of the future, which seems quite bright. One thing we never talked of was—S-E-X!

The Chinese have got to be the most cynical people on earth. Men and women dress in a kind of unisex: an open-collared sport shirt, hanging outside of baggy blue trousers.

We never saw a couple holding hands. Nor, come to think of it, did we see many couples at all. Mostly, boys walked together, or girls. But rarely a boy and a girl. "Chinese do not show emotion in public," we were told. Yu, our interpreter, also told us that there was no prostitution in China. "All former prostitutes now gainfully employed," he said rather proudly.

Yu was married. But he lived in Peking and his wife, a teacher, lived in Shanghai. He said this presented no problems. He got to Shanghai in his work maybe once a month. And besides, next year there is the possibility of a transfer.

Yu was typical of most of the Chinese we met—rather shy, but extremely polite and punctiliously proper. They have an exact awareness of protocol and a great sense of style. Which brings us back to Premier Chou En-lai and the night of our meeting.

We had been in Peking for three days and nothing officially had been said about the chances for meeting with the Premier. Then on our last scheduled day in Peking, we got the rather mysterious word about 3 P.M. that "something important may happen tonight." We asked Yu if that "something important" might be the long-awaited meeting with Chou En-lai. He simply shrugged his shoulders and said, "Don't know." We got our cameras and sound gear together, however, just in case.

And we asked Yu, "If this something important tonight turns out to be a meeting with Chou En-lai, should we bring our own lights, or will you have lights there for us?" Again, a polite "Don't know."

Then, about 7:30 that evening, Bill Brown, the U.S. State Department officer accompanying the Boggs-Ford party, stuck his head in the door and solemnly announced: "We have just → received an invitation from Premier Chou En-lai to a banquet tonight in the Great Hall of the People." What time? we asked. "We are to be informed," he said. And he left.

With that our Mr. Yu rose and, looking like the cat that just swallowed the Chinese nightingale, said with obvious relish, "Well, now I can tell you there will be lights tonight." But what time? we pleaded. "Don't know."

So we waited. In coat and tie in 95-degree heat we waited, with only a small oscillating fan to stir up the humid air. By 9 P.M. we had almost given up. By 10 we were asleep across our beds. At 10:30 we were awakened by Yu. "We must hurry," he said. "We can't keep the Premier waiting." So we raced through the empty streets of Peking to the immense Great Hall of the People on Tien An Men Square. Up the wide steps, across a massive foyer, then, impulsively, through that lonely door, and our face-to-face meeting with Chou En-lai.

Thankfully, after we shook hands, it was announced that the congressmen had arrived. And there was no time for small talk. Chou immediately took up his position outside in the foyer and greeted the congressmen, their wives, and each member of the party individually, and with great courtesy. Then, as if on signal, he led them all to one end of the room, furnished with a backdrop and risers. They all crowded around Chou, and still pictures were taken to record the moment for all.

Then dinner began. And what a dinner it was. There were eight courses, beginning with hors d'oeuvres of duck, pork, chicken, jellyfish, peanuts and giant sea cucumber. Then came two servings of duck, skin and meat served separately; water lettuce and sponge gourd, duck-bone soup with white gourd, millet porridge and fruit.

It was during the dinner that we realized that we—Jim and I—had not been included in the group picture. We were too busy filming the whole thing. So we asked Ma Yu Chen, Yu's boss, if there was any way we could get a picture of the two of us with the Premier. "I'll see," he said.

As soon as dinner was over, he was at Chou's side, whispering in his ear. Chou nodded his head and walked immediately to the huge backdrop behind his table. He looked around, spotted Jim and me looking anxious, and motioned us over to his side. A Chinese photographer materialized from the shadows and the picture was taken. Another moment and Chou En-lai was gone, off with Boggs and Ford to talk until 5 in the morning.

Our travels in China covered thousands of miles, from Shanghai on the China Sea, to Peking, to Manchuria and the steel-making centers of Shenyang (formerly Mukden) and Anshan; all the way to Canton in the south. And everywhere we went the people were polite and curious. In the north it was a polite curiosity—stares from a distance. We were told we were the first Americans to visit Manchuria since 1949. In Canton, however, we were surrounded by hundreds of people, chattering about the camera and the photographer with the long hair and the reporter with the red beard.

We saw and photographed much in the 10 days allowed us: The Great Wall, the Forbidden City (the old Imperial Palace), hospitals and schools, steel mills and kindergartens, auto plants and acrobats. But our most vivid memories of China are of the people—that awesome mass of people who make up a quarter of the population of the world. Taken one at a time, they are just like you and me—they work, they play, they love and have children. They are poor, all of them. But they seem happy. And they look forward to tomorrow.

We are glad to have had the opportunity to meet them. Because we're sure we will be meeting them again and again—tomorrow. (END)

Television's political coverage . . .

What Does America Think Now?

The results of TV GUIDE's second national opinion poll

By Roger J. Youman

The conventions are over, the Presidential candidates have been chosen and their campaigns are under way—and all the while television has been providing comprehensive coverage of this intensely political year. Are the American people satisfied with that coverage? Do they have faith in the integrity of TV newsmen? Have public attitudes changed during 1972?

These are the basic questions we tried to answer in TV GUIDE's second nation-wide election-year survey. And the results contain considerable analytical meat for viewers, broadcasters and politicians to chew on. Some of the more intriguing morsels:

- ☐ More Americans had confidence in television news in the fall of 1972 than did so last winter, when we took our first poll.
- ☐ A vast majority of us believe that television is our best source for political news. All other media combined don't come close in our survey.
- ☐ The public seems to sense less bias in TV's political reporting than it once did.

All of this, of course, is heartening news for the television industry, which with one hand has been pouring manpower and money into its election-year operations and with the other has been parrying charges of bias from various sectors of the political spectrum. But before they take one of those hands and start patting themselves on the back with it, it would be prudent to check some of the other results of the poll. There are signs that when it comes to actually watching political coverage, the rousing vote of confidence in TV's election-year performance is an empty endorsement, unsupported by genuine commitment. The poll, you see, also leads to these conclusions:

- ☐ The great majority of Americans—as many as two-thirds or more of them—actually watched little or none of the convention programming.
- ☐ Most of us would be happy to see just one network cover the conventions while the others carry on with regular programming.
- ☐ The impact of television on viewers' political attitudes is almost nil.

(Those political attitudes, incidentally, corresponded pretty closely with what was being reported by virtually all the other pollsters at the time our survey was taken. Our sample contained more people who considered themselves Democrats than Republicans, but more who declared that they were supporters of President Nixon than Senator McGovern, and more who labeled themselves conservative than liberal. It is important to emphasize, however, that none of these expressions of political preferences can be construed as guarantees of what the respondents will do when they enter a polling booth on Nov. 7. The questions were asked merely to confirm that there was a broadly representative political mix in the sample.)

The poll was conducted for TV GUIDE by the Opinion Research Corporation, of Princeton, N.J. ORC questioners fanned out across the land shortly after the Republican convention, between Aug. 26 and Sept. 7, interviewing a scientifically selected sample of 1002 persons (507 men, 495 women), all 18 or older and living in private households in the continental United States.

Here are the principal questions they were asked, and an analysis of their responses:

Of these four major news media, which one, in your opinion, provides the most complete political reporting and coverage—including political news, personalities and events? 1. Magazines. 2. Newspapers. 3. Radio. 4. Television.

The winner is television, by a smashing majority of 63 per cent—up a significant 8 points since winter. In second place, way back, are newspapers, preferred by 19 per cent—a loss of 9 points since the first poll. Magazines were favored by only 7 per cent of the interviewees, radio by 5 per cent. (No opinion: 6 per cent.)

When you break down the figures by demographic subgroups, you find that many differences in choice that existed last winter, in Poll #1, have vanished. Magazines still received 17 per cent of the college-educated group's preferential vote, but even in that segment of the sample, TV was the majority choice, by 56 per cent. Indeed, no class of citizens gave TV less than 56 per cent of its vote. The rural residents awarded it 73 per cent, and middle-incomers ($7000-10,000) 70 per cent. Political orientation didn't make any difference either. Liberals or conservatives, Democrats or Republicans, McGovern supporters or Nixonites—more than 60 per cent of each of these subgroups are convinced that TV is the most complete political-news source.

Which one of these media do you think is the fairest and most objective in its political reporting and coverage?

Again, it's TV by a landslide. The preferences: TV, 53 per cent (up 6 per cent since winter); newspapers, 15 per cent (down 3); magazines, 8 per cent (down 3); radio, 7 per cent (down 1); no opinion, 17 per cent.

Here, the TV generation manifested its faith in the medium it grew up with, as 61 per cent of the 18-to-29-year-olds chose television as the fairest and most objective of the four media. On the other hand, TV scored poorest with the over-60s (44 per cent), Easterners (42) and jobless (47). Still, even among these less enthusiastic groups, television scored higher than the other media.

More nonwhites than whites felt that TV was the fairest of them all—66 to 50 per cent. McGovern supporters found TV the most objective (58 per cent) more often than Nixon backers did (51 per cent).

Of these four television networks—ABC, CBS, NBC and Public Broadcasting Service (also called educational TV or NET)—which one do you think is the fairest and most objective in its political reporting and coverage, or do you think there is no difference among the networks in this respect?

As was generally the case in Poll #1, one out of every two people either saw no difference among the networks in their fairness (40 per cent) or else had no opinion (11).

Among the opinionated half of the sample, CBS held a slight lead for objectivity (19 per cent) over NBC (13), ABC (12) and PBS (5).

Which of these statements best describes your opinion of television's political reporting and coverage? 1. Very little, if any, is biased. 2. More is objective than biased. 3. More is biased than objective. 4. Almost all is biased.

Here again, TV gained ground in its quest for the confidence of its audience. More than half of the respondents either saw very little, if any, bias in TV's political reporting (24 per cent) or found it generally more objective than biased (28), whereas less than a third of them saw TV coverage as either more biased than objective (12 per cent) or almost all biased (16).

That's a gain of 5 percentage points in TV's objectivity rating and a drop of 6 in its bias standing since winter.

Nixonites, by the way, perceive more impartiality in political reporting than McGovernites do.

When you feel that TV political bias does exist, what direction do you feel it takes? 1. In favor of the Republicans. 2. In favor of the Democrats. 3. In favor of the liberal viewpoint. 4. In favor of the conservative viewpoint. 5. In favor of the Administration in Washington. 6. Against the Administration.

Here, interviewees could select as many of these answers as they wished, and so the totals add up to more than 100 per cent. The result is a well-sliced-up pie: 15 per cent perceive bias in favor of the Republicans and 13 per cent in favor of the Democrats; 12 per cent see TV favoring the liberal viewpoint and 10 per cent slanted toward the conservatives; 22 per cent perceive the medium on the Administration's side and 16 per cent against it. In short, bias is in the eye of the beholder.

But there's one more interesting statistic: the biggest percentage of all —33 per cent—expressed no opinion. Thus one out of three people polled didn't feel strongly enough about TV bias to point a finger in any direction.

As for trends since last winter, 3 per cent more of the respondents now feel that bias favors the GOP, while there is no change in the totals for those who see pro-Democratic bias. The biggest change is in the perception of anti-Administration bias—23 per cent cited it last winter, but only 16 per cent this fall.

Is television, then, less left-leaning than some of its critics have claimed? Or have network newsmen been cooling it—going out of their way to avoid offending the Administration—as other observers have charged? These are questions that have not been—and cannot be—answered in our poll. Viewers will have to judge for themselves. All we can do is report opinions—what people think about TV's objectivity or bias.

The sum of it is that a 50-50 split still exists among Americans over whether TV's political coverage leans left or right, but more people than previously now think the partiality is pro-Administration.

How much time did you spend watching the Democratic National Convention?

Now we get into a new group of questions—this one, and those that follow, weren't asked in Poll #1.

The answers in this case indicate that the Democrats—despite the scrappiness of their convention—were not able to arouse much excitement at the setside. A big 65 per cent of the citizenry either ignored the TV coverage totally (25 per cent) or watched four hours or less of it (40).

How much time did you spend watching the Republican National Convention?

Here, where the outcome was never in doubt and there was little evidence of intraparty conflict, there was even less public interest—74 per cent of the populace either did not tune in at all (30 per cent) or watched for less than four hours (44).

Would you say the TV networks were fairer and more objective in covering the Democratic convention or the Republican convention, or were both covered with the same degree of fairness and objectivity?

The majority (52 per cent) found no difference in the way the two conventions were covered. But more than a third of the people polled (35 per cent) had no opinion at all on the subject, another reflection of a formidable lack of interest in the conventions on the part of the public. A tiny minority (6 per cent) thought the Democratic coverage was fairer; another small group (7 per cent) said the Republican coverage was fairer.

Would you prefer to see the TV networks cover future conventions as they did this year, or would you rather see only one network cover the conventions and the other networks continue their regular programs?

The public gave the networks something to ponder here. Slightly more than half of the interviewees (51 per cent) said that one network would suffice. Of the others, 38 per cent favored all-network coverage, and 11 per cent had no opinion.

No particular subgroup stood out in favor of the one-network idea—it had support all along the line, ranging as high as 60 per cent with manual/service workers and 59 per cent with Midwesterners. All-network coverage got its biggest backing from the college educated, from Easterners and from city dwellers.

In covering this year's conventions, should TV have spent as much time as it did in the networks' anchor booths and interviewing people on the floor, or should it have spent more time on the actual activities taking place at the podium?

Some politicians and viewers complained about the networks' practice of reporting and seeking out their own stories rather than letting viewers see the conventions for themselves. But no decisive support for these complaints is evident in our poll. The vote: 37 per cent for the way the networks did it, 33 per cent for more time at the podium and (again) a large 30 per cent expressing no opinion.

Democrats were split on the issue of common practice vs. podium (36 to 35 per cent), but Republicans backed the networks' method, 42 to 33 per cent.

So far in this campaign, has TV strengthened your feelings about the Presidential candidate of your choice, has it weakened your feelings, has it in any way confused your feelings, or hasn't it had any effect on your feelings?

The quick answer: no effect, for the most part—that's what 48 per cent said. But TV has reinforced a lot more feelings than it has weakened; 29 per cent reported their feelings strengthened, contrasted to only 5 per cent weakened (and 10 per cent confused; 8 per cent no opinion).

Predictably, considering the disunited way the Democrats went into the fall campaign and the united front presented by the GOP, 41 per cent of Republicans said their feelings were strengthened by TV, and only 6 per cent confused; meanwhile, just 24 per cent of the Democrats felt emotionally strengthened, and 15 per cent confessed confusion.

Those are the facts and figures from Poll #2. They are our findings—as of September 1972—on public attitudes toward television's election-year performance. By the time Election Day rolls around and the American people have chosen their next President, will they see television in a different light? We'll find out. Right after the electorate goes to the polls, we will be asking a broad cross-section of them some of the same questions, plus some new ones. We'll report the results of that Poll #3 before year's end. (END)

This Week's Movies

By Judith Crist

Saturday, NBC Cactus Flower
 Sunday, ABC Love Story
 Monday, NBC The Beguiled
 Tuesday, ABC Playmates

Goldie Hawn's Oscar-winning movie debut and a classic James Stewart creation provide the goodies in a network-movie week that proves that being in love means never using naughty words—at least on video.

The proof lies in Love Story, that 1970 commercial success that proved that schmaltz can be sold wholesale when properly packaged. The package, made from the hard-cover best-seller version of Erich Segal's screenplay, involved an inarticulate Harvard jock and a doomed-to-die-of-an-unidentified disease Radcliffe Mozart maven whose articulation consisted primarily of four- and eight-letter obscenities. Since these are no-no words on television, we can anticipate a near-silent up-dated version of "Camille," with Ali McGraw and Ryan O'Neal bleeping their way into the hearts of the Nation—with an unspoken "Hello, sucker" for those who reach for the Kleenex instead of the Alka-Seltzer.

Keep that medicine handy for The Beguiled, one of 1971's worst movies, obviously designed so that the family that likes to get sick together can do it at the movies—or while watching TV. This lurid concoction is about a wounded Civil War soldier taken into a girls' school and done away with when he fails to respond to the libidinous advances of headmistress, teacher and students. Once again, prissy old television will undoubtedly (and hopefully) cut the R-rated film's high spots—the on-screen amputation of Clint Eastwood's leg by Geraldine Page with razor and hacksaw—but will retain this hack-work's thesis that females will kill any man who denies them sexual satisfaction. This Don Siegel film is a must for sadists and woman-haters.

Compared with these, The Undefeated almost seems bearable. Under Andrew V. McLaglen's usual immortalize-the-worst-of-Western-cliches direction, this multimillion-dollar 1969 mishmash is just another oater, complete with John Wayne as Wayne, Ole Kunnel Rock Hudson as Ole Kunnel Rock Hudson, and more Rebs, Union men, Indians, Mexicans, bandits, royalists and revolutionaries than you'd want to shake a fist at. The only surprise is that it's wound up on prime time instead of the late-late-late show for which it seems designed.

On Tuesday's late show, however, you'll find 1949's The Stratton Story, a faithful and deeply moving film biography of Chicago White Sox pitcher Monty Stratton, who made a professional comeback after losing a leg in a hunting accident. James Stewart scores a personal triumph as the valiant ballplayer—and even non-ball-fans will thrill to ninth-inning excitement on the diamond and the heart and sentiment of the story.

It is, however, the pure gold of Goldie Hawn, one of the delights of Cactus Flower, that provides the week's prime pleasure. This 1969 film, derived from Abe Burrows' Broadway hit, is sparked by Walter Matthau as the swinging dentist and given substance by Ingrid Bergman as his stiff-necked nurse. But it is Goldie, as cuddlesome a sex kitten as ever had a bit of intelligence and a womanly heart to brighten the dumb-blonde stereotype, who, as Matthau's kooky young mistress, provides the vitality and sheer likability to make this slickish story come alive and capture you. Credit too the screenplay by Billy Wilder's longtime writing partner, I.A.L. Diamond, and tidy direction by Gene Saks.

The week's one prime-time rerun also provides vitality and likability. It's of To Sir, with Love, the 1967 fact-based film about a black teacher in a London slum that captured the hearts of young audiences five years ago. Sugary and slick though it be, however, it glows with performances—chief among them those of Sidney Poitier and Judy Geeson—and a charm that I, for one, find irresistible.

The week's remaining prime-time premieres are of tailored-for-television flicks, as usual unpreviewed. This week at least, however, the plots lean toward the complicated rather than the blood-and-gore-and-spooks themes that are so prevalent. Footsteps, for instance, centers on college football, with Richard Crenna as a coach pressured to produce a winning team or else. It was filmed on location at Citrus Community College in Azusa, Cal. Playmates explores domesticity, with Alan Alda and Doug McClure as a couple of divorced men who become friends and start secretly dating each other's ex-wives to learn not only about each other but also about themselves. Rolling Man, however, goes in for more usual melodrama, with Dennis Weaver as an ex-con in search of his two sons who disappeared after the death of his wife while he was in prison. Pilot-fashion, he just keeps rolling along.

In some areas network movies may not be seen on the days indicated.

CACTUS FLOWER

A comedy as kooky as Goldie Hawn's giggle.

Walter Matthau and Ingrid Bergman are fun as philandering dentist and the stiff-as-starch nurse who carries a torch for him. But it's Goldie who glitters. She won an Oscar as Toni Simmons, a Greenwich Village ding-a-ling who helps the doctor turn honest—and the Swedish iceberg become an alluring swinger.

Two premiere comedy veterans collaborated on this 1969 film: director Gene Saks, whose credits include "The Odd Couple" and "Last of the Red Hot Lovers"; and screenwriter I.A.L. Diamond, who worked with Billy Wilder on "Some Like It Hot."

Cast... Julian: Walter Matthau. Stephanie: Ingrid Bergman. Toni: Goldie Hawn. Harvey Greenfield: Jack Weston. Igor Sullivan: Rick Lenz. Sanchez: Vito Scotti. Mrs. Durant: Irene Hervey. Georgia: Eve Bruce.

61 WORDS OF LIFE (BW)

4:30 5 FACE THE NATION

8 15 18 SPEAKING FREELY

Guest: veteran director Frank Capra, whose roots in Hollywood stretch back to the silent era (one critic praised Capra as being "responsible for Harry Langdon's most successful silent comedies"). Capra talks about the early days of Hollywood. (60 min.)

9 NASHVILLE MUSIC

Guests: Conway Twitty, Loretta Lynn and Bobby Lord.

11 MOVIE—Comedy

"Take Her, She's Mine" (1963), a look at the growing pains of an overprotective father and his college-coed daughter. Frank: James Stewart. Mollie: Sandra Dee. Anne: Audrey Meadows. Pope-Jones: Robert Morley. Ivor: John McGiver. (2 hrs.)

12 UNTAMED WORLD

On film: predators and scavengers of the animal world.

17 PORTER WAGONER

46 ORAL ROBERTS

Sermon topic: "Now Is the Time."

5:00 5 12 13 YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERT

Special: Music's breezy three-quarter time is celebrated. Michael Tilson Thomas leads the New York Philharmonic in tracing the history of this popular rhythm. Highlights . . . a traditional peasant dance from the medieval work "The Play of Daniel"; a minuet from Haydn's Symphony No. 97 in C Major; the lilting "Blue Danube Waltz," by Strauss; Ravel's "La Valse," a driving, eerie tone poem; and a lively scherzo from Beethoven's "Eroica" symphony. (60 min.)

[Pre-empts regular programming.]

9 MOVIE—Mystery

"Port Afrique." (English; 1956) A war veteran (Phil Carey) sets out to in-

17 ROLLER DERBY

30 MIND OF MAN

Special: An acclaimed BBC study exploring the mysteries of the human brain. Experiments filmed around the world probe . . . the development of the brain before birth; the effect of LSD on brain cells; how learning and sexual drive cause chemical changes within the brain; and concepts of mind over matter: in New Delhi, a yogi consciously reduces his oxygen intake; in New York, a man wills his blood pressure down. David Prowitt is the narrator. (Repeat; 2 hrs.)

46 CHRIST . . . THE ANSWER

61 MOVIE—Suspense (BW)

"Witness to Murder." See Sat. 8 P.M. Ch. 61. (90 min.)

5:30 8 15 18 MOVIE—Drama (BW)

Film Odyssey: Fritz Lang's "Spies" (German; 1928), a silent classic from the director of "M." Key elements: bizarre characters, gadgetry and tongue-in-cheek plotting. Haghl: Rudolf Klein-Rogge. (90 min.)

46 DEAF HEAR

EVENING

6:00 5 12 13 60 MINUTES

Return: Lively and timely film essays—from the ITT scandal to the Clifford Irving hoax—sparked this news series last year. Expect the same style this season as producer Don Hewitt seeks to "chronicle the manners, morals and mores of our time." Mike Wallace and Morley Safer are hosts for the show, seen on an irregular basis during the pro football season. Also featured: columnists Nicholas von Hoffman (Washington Post) and James J. Kilpatrick (Washington Star). (60 min.)

17 STAR TREK

Kirk is transformed into two people: one meek—the other violently animalistic. Kirk: William Shatner. Spock: Leonard Nimoy. (60 min.)

Performers: pianist Ursula Oppens, violinist Nobuko Imai and clarinetist Michael Webster.

9 PAUL LYNDE—Comedy

Insult comedy: comics Jerry Stiller and Anne Meara make the first of several appearances as son-in-law Howie's estranged and battling parents. Martha: Elizabeth Allen. Howie: John Calvin. Barbara: Jane Actman. Sally: Pamelyn Ferdin. Supporting Cast . . . Inspector: John Wyler.

11 EBONY BEAT JOURNAL

12 NEWS—Red Brown

13 THE WALTONS—Drama

Children and their pets: a tender relationship explored in this Depression-era story about the Waltons and a pet calf headed for the slaughterhouse. Veteran actor Leonard Stone portrays a farmer. John-Boy: Richard Thomas. John: Ralph Walte. Olivia: Michael Learned. Grandma: Ellen Corby. Grandpa: Will Geer. Jim-Bob: David S. Harper. Elizabeth: Kaml Cotler. Sheriff Bridges: John Crawford. Jason: Jon Walmsley. Mary Ellen: Judy Norton. Ben: Eric Scott. Erin: Mary Elizabeth McDonough. (60 min.)

15 18 45 Zoom

Return: A more grown-up "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood"—that's the flavor of "Zoom," a series aimed at ages 7-13. The accent's on creativity as the young regulars take part in songs, dances, films and sketches. Says producer Christopher Sarson: "Kids watching 'Zoom' are doing something more than just watching television."

46 RIGHT ON—Music

7:30 2 3 41 WORLD OF DISNEY

Nashville is the setting for the adventures of two transplanted Californians: an aspiring songwriter and a displaced coyote. It's the coyote that sees the action as the mistaken quarry of a wolf hunt. The narration is talking-blues by country songwriter Mayf Nutter. (60 min.)

Cast

Johnny Martin . . . . . Walter Forbes
Harlan . . . . . William Garton
Bluebelle's Master . . . Eugene Scott

5 12 ANNA AND THE KING—Comedy-Drama

A tiger hunt: great excitement for the King, stomach-churning fright for the crown prince and lessons in courage for both of them. King: Yul Brynner. Anna: Samantha Eggar. Prince: Brian Tochi. Louis: Eric Shea. Kralahome: Keye Luke. Guest Cast . . . Doctor: James Hong.

8 15 18 45 JUST GENERATION—Discussion

Debut: Learn about the law in this 13-week series combining rap sessions, satirical sketches and original dramas. Host Howard Miller (of the "Advocates") leads a panel of high school students through topics ranging from bail to capital punishment. Also: the Ace Trucking Company in spoofs of the system.

9 THIS IS YOUR LIFE

See Sat. 7:30 P.M. Ch. 11.

11 I'VE GOT A SECRET

30 JEAN SHEPHERD'S AMERICA

In Little America, Wyo. (pop. 25), Jean and crew are trapped in a blizzard. Perfect setting for Jean to recall Midwest blizzards of his youth when his parents would push him out with "Make school or die!" (Repeat)

8 15 18 45 FAMILY GAME—Discussion

Debut: Drugs, premarital sex, black militancy and other issues widening the generation gap are explored by sociologist Lewis Yablonsky. Each show centers on a psychodrama rap session between adults and teenagers. The participants (not necessarily related) are encouraged to act out family conflicts. Tonight: a young hippie and a middle-aged father contrast their life styles.

9 11 FBI

"The Fatal Showdown," about a gang of art thieves being tracked by the FBI and a mysterious gunman. Erskine: Efrem Zimbalist Jr. Ward: Philip Abbott. (60 min.)

MOVIE

9:00 9 11

One of the greatest tear-jerkers in Hollywood history.

This 1970 movie has grossed more than $50 million (third highest of all time) and the novella—completed after the movie script—was on the best-seller charts for more than a year. Erich Segal's story is an idyllic rich boy-poor girl romance set against college life at Harvard and Radcliffe.

Directed on location in New York and Massachusetts by Arthur Hiller. Francis Lai ("A Man and a Woman") composed the Oscar-winning score.

Doctors Report Way That Relieves Itching, Pain Of Swollen Hemorrhoidal Tissues

First Applications Give Prompt, Temporary Relief in Many Cases

There's a most effective medication that in many cases gives prompt relief for hours from such hemorrhoidal discomfort and actually helps shrink swelling of hemorrhoidal tissues caused by the inflammation.

The answer is doctor-tested Preparation H®. There's no other hemorrhoidal formula like Preparation H and it needs no prescription. Ointment or suppositories.

A new kind of children's television series

Tomorrow afternoon, ABC begins a series of specials designed to entertain and enlighten your child. "Last of the Curlews" is a heart-warming story of a lonely bird, threatened with extinction, who migrates across two continents in search of a mate. This beautifully animated drama is both a touching story and a marvelous medium for education, teaching about migration, flight, instinct and ecology. Don't miss the ABC After School Specials on the first Wednesday of every month.

BUICK. The solid feeling for '73.

ELECTRA 225 LIMITED

For 1973, Buick offers an extra-ordinary system of innovations you can actually feel.

With your hands. With your ears. With all your senses. For example, there is a built-in emission control system so advanced you may actually sense a new degree of engine smoothness. It's subtle, but it's there.

1. For 1973, there's a rugged braking system that automatically balances front and rear braking forces for smooth, confident stops.

2. Deep, roomy full-foam seats. For solid comfort and support.

3. AeroDrive. For stable handling, even on bumpy roads.

4. A new front and rear bumper system.

Many things you may never become aware of: like Buick's double-paneled roof. But the silence, the sense of solidity, is there because of it.

Never before have we brought together so many innovations so well. The total feeling is Buick.

5. The solid feeling for 1973. It's an experience.

BUICK.

The solid feeling.

THE GIRL WHO LOVES BERNIE...

As co-star of the motion picture "Ben," Meredith Baxter plays the older sister of a normal American boy who strikes up a friendship with rats.

At least the kid didn't run with hippies.

When the boy finds out that the Board of Health is on the trail of the rats, he goes down to the sewer to tip them off. You might say he was ratting on the Board of Health.

Picturing him in danger, his sister follows him to the sewer. She screams in the darkness. She cries. And she takes a header into the muck, emerging quite ungroomed for Sunday cotillion. If her brother catches bubonic plague, it is still too good for him.

When a lady finishes a film such as this, her vulnerability is understandable, explaining why Miss Baxter, three days later, agreed to live above a delicatessen in New York's Lower East Side in the new CBS series Bridget Loves Bernie.

The location doesn't enchant her, but even the aroma of salami is better than the sewer.

Meredith plays Bridget Fitzgerald, whose family is Manhattan society. It also is Irish and Catholic. She marries Bernie Steinberg, who is neither. Bernie, in fact, is Jewish, the son of Sam and Sophie Steinberg, who operate the delicatessen. Bernie also has an Uncle Moe and a close friend named Otis, who is black.

Bridget counters with a brother who is a priest, and with a mother and father who belong to the country club and yacht club, both restricted.

But Mr. Fitzgerald assures Bernie, "Some of our best friends are Jewish."

"Name five," Mrs. Fitzgerald interjects.

Stuck for an answer, her husband blurts out, "How about that lady we met at the UN function?"

"Do you mean Golda Meir?" she answers.

"That's the one," says Mr. F., who then inquires of Bernie, "Do you know her?"

"I know of her," he replies. "But we never exactly dated."

The Fitzgeralds are bravely tolerant of their son-in-law, just as the Steinbergs try to find a place in their hearts for the shiksa married to Bernie.

Screen Gems, which produces the series, describes it basically as a love story, with the ethnic overtones only incidental. But others see it as a natural for the time slot it occupies—immediately following All in the Family. It can fill the voids on the nights Archie Bunker is feeling benign.

The daughter of actress Whitney Blake and former radio announcer Tom Baxter (first of Miss Blake's three husbands), Meredith was born 25 years ago in Pasadena, where she spent part of her youth taking voice lessons. She later pursued this training at the Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan.

Her personal life, however, is a sour note. Married at 19, she had two children (now 5 and 3) and then separated from her husband, from whom she was divorced early last year.

"I was very

trained for any job," she recalls glumly. "All I ever had done was work as an usher, as a file clerk and as a checker in a cafeteria."

With her mother's financial help, she took acting lessons and succeeded in getting parts in TV commercials. Then, beginning in 1970, minor roles followed in dramatic and comedy series before Meredith won her first part of consequence in "Ben," the rodent opera.

Rising 5 feet 7, blonde and blue-eyed, Miss Baxter has a reputation at the studio for shyness, a characteristic not common to her profession. She smiles readily, displaying magnificent rows of teeth, and she talks sweetly, but not a lot.

"She is a very quiet person," says Douglas S. Cramer, executive producer of Bridget Loves Bernie. "She is conscientious and always shows up on time, but isn't the type you get to know quickly."

Given the part of Bridget, Meredith was summoned by Screen Gems for still photos to be used for publicity, but she owned so little clothing (and what she had was so plain) that she had to be sent to the wardrobe department for attire more befitting the star of a series.

Her interest in dresses is almost negligible. Most of her outfits, in fact, are made by her stand-in, Robin Harleman, a divorcee with whom she shares a rented house in Sherman Oaks, in the San Fernando Valley. Miss Harleman also has two small children.

Since both women are a size 6, they wear each other's clothes. Miss Baxter owns no furs and no jewelry, except an inexpensive set of earrings. She looks at you strangely when you inquire into her possessions. She gives you the impression that this is an intrusion, and she clams up.

"Are you prudent with your money?"

she was asked.

"I probably have a bad concept of money," she responded. "When I got paid for 'Ben,' I went out and bought a washer, a dryer, a freezer and a TV set, all on the same afternoon."

"Do you mean you never owned a washer?"

"I did our wash at the Laundromat."

Her tone suggested, "Don't most people?"

Miss Baxter doesn't own a car. She drives a rented station wagon. Can any other actress make that claim?

On the day she read for the part of Bridget, Meredith met David Birney, a young actor who had spent five years on the stage and in television in New York. He was testing for the role of Bernie Steinberg. This was to result in both a professional and off-stage relationship. The two since have seen each other almost daily in what is described as a serious friendship.

An English major at Dartmouth who later earned his master's in theater arts at UCLA, Birney grew up in Cleveland, where his father was an FBI agent. A Protestant, playing a pronounced Jewish role, David sees no cause for special concern.

"Brando played 'The Godfather'," he says, "and he isn't Italian. Besides, living in New York five years, I became street-oriented to the city. There's a certain rhythm to ethnic New York. Once you learn it, you can play almost any part. All I've had to do is brush up on Yiddish pronunciation."

Naturally, both Birney and Miss Baxter are concerned doing a series sandwiched on the same network between two major winners such as All in the Family and The Mary Tyler Moore Show.

"If they ran mouse races after All in the Family," says Birney, "people would leave their sets on. That means the pressure of a large audience is → on us, behooving us to be good."

If there is another problem for the two principal players, it would be that they are crawling through a series crowded by nine prominent characters, all of whom appear in most episodes.

"This can frighten stars to death," says producer Cramer, "especially in a 30-minute show. They develop the feeling that they are going to be lost in the mob."

Miss Baxter was asked, "After All in the Family, won't viewers have had their quota that night of ethnic humor?"

"We are hoping," she answered, "that as the series continues, the ethnic angles won't be belabored. Besides, the prejudice of our characters is more subtle than Archie Bunker's. In one scene, for instance, Mrs. Steinberg feels I am undernourished. She encourages me to eat her matzoh-ball soup. I don't like the soup, but try to be polite. I get sick. She says to her family wistfully, 'Why couldn't that wonderful girl throwing up in the bathroom be Jewish?'"

Overt or underplayed, the ethnic theme unmistakably has made its crater on television. And David Birney guesses that ethnic series will be popular at least another 10 years before they run their cycle and vanish.

"TV realizes it must acknowledge that ethnic problems exist," he says. "One way or another, it will deal with these problems, as society deals with them."

If David gives ethnic shows 10 years, CBS has guaranteed only 13 weeks to Bridget Loves Bernie, with an option to do 11 more.

But the future doesn't worry Miss Baxter. Quietly, she fosters the hope one day of applying her years of voice training in a musical comedy. One thing never tried in show business is a musical with rats. They have proved they can act, but they haven't yet shown they can sing. (END)

Doctor in the House is one of the few good things to emerge from the FCC's order that networks reduce their prime-time programming. Without that push, local stations would not have had to cast around for a fresh syndicated series, and they would never have discovered Drs. Michael Upton, Duncan Waring and their colleagues and teachers at the crumbling St. Swithin's Teaching Hospital in London.

It was 7 one Friday evening on the St. Swithin's set at London Weekend Television's (LWT) studio in the London suburb of Wembley. Doctor in the House had just completed its final runthrough.

"Let's have a drink," said producer Humphrey Barclay.

He walked briskly through the winding corridors in London Weekend's studio until he came, somehow, to a smoky, noisy bar where the entire company—actors and technicians—were taking 90 minutes to loosen up with beer, ale, a certain amount of gin and a couple of games of darts before the evening's performance in front of a live audience. Though the bar was buried in the building, you might have thought you had wandered into any crowded London pub on a Friday night.

Part of the obvious good feeling must come from the fact that everyone knows that they are working on a show that has become a world-wide success—though, more or less, by accident. For it was made exclusively for British audiences, with no thought of export. Just to prove that the best-laid plans can go pleasantly wrong, Doctor in the House has ranked high in Australia, New Zealand, and Yugoslavia, and is a big hit in Finland, Sweden, Canada, East Germany, Greece, Holland, Hong Kong, Malta, and all of Central and South America. It is being carried this season—as it was carried last season—by stations in the U.S.

"It's taken us by surprise, this selling so widely," said Barclay, having discovered a small space in one corner in which to sit. "We're not geared to turning out those mid-Atlantic shows like The Persuaders that are supposed to win the Queen's export award. And we didn't make any compromises. If we had, we would have destroyed the English character of the show, which is its real strength."

"Part of the appeal," he added, "must come from the universality of medicine. But no one has ever made humor out of it before for television. In real life, of course, everyone is worried about illness, about going into the hospital, and the show—with its youth and cheerful cast—relieves the worry a bit. Although, I would certainly worry twice over if my doctor sent me to St. Swithin's."

Fortunately for the genuinely ill, St. Swithin's does not exist. The six-centuries-old London teaching hospital was actually called into imaginary existence 20 years ago by Dr. Richard Gordon, who, soon after graduating from medical school, signed on as a ship's doctor on a cargo boat sailing to Australia. A remarkably healthy crew gave him plenty of time to write a book, which he vaguely planned as a cross between "Tom Brown's School Days" and "Gray's Anatomy." It turned into "Doctor in the House," the first of his many books about merry medical students.

Some of his former teachers were a bit surprised to learn that Gordon had this hidden talent, but he recently explained: "I had been working on a medical journal, where the editor put me in charge of famous doctors' obituary notices. This experience I felt invaluable in learning to write convincing fiction." The books, ultimately translated into 17 languages, gave birth to an equally popular movie series (with Dirk Bogarde) and were grandfather in inspiration to that never-ending series of "Carry On" films.

When LWT (a network founded in 1968 and now headed by Britain's former ambassador to Washington, John Chief and chum to everybody in the show," declared Robin Nedwell, who plays Dr. Duncan Waring.

Barclay has been aided by the fact that two of the chief writers are themselves qualified (though nonpracticing) doctors. One of them is the sharp-featured Graeme Garden, who is also a "Footlights" alumnus. "My medical training was useful," he said, "because I can draw on my own and my friends' experiences. Also, I can remember enough medicine or know where to look it up to keep the show factually correct."

"I certainly know what it is like to live and work in a hospital," he added

Freeman) decided to revive the series, they turned the production over to Barclay. An agreeable young man of country-gentleman pedigree whose long hair makes him look considerably younger than 31, Barclay came out of the same famous "Footlights" undergraduate revue at Cambridge University where Jonathan Miller and "Beyond the Fringe" did their teething. With plenty of experience in radio and television comedy, Barclay has succeeded in guiding Doctor in the House to some No. 1 ratings in Britain. The show certainly bears his imprint, especially in its contemporary quality and its extra energy. "Humphrey is both Great White with what can only be described as a sigh. "When you're a student, you can be fairly irresponsible, but when you become a doctor, you have to become a sober chap. But both students and doctors have a slightly callous sense of humor. If you can't laugh at terrible things and the awful life, then you start brooding. It's a defense. The humor of the series has to reflect that. At times it might get near the macabre. But we still remember that we're writing for a family audience."

The show's course has not been all smooth. Although it has no star, the leading actor the first two years (it's a year ahead in Britain), Barry Evans, →

recently quit. Evans, a former member of Lord Olivier's National Theatre, was never very comfortable playing in what by comparison seemed light comedy. He grew tired of having ladies walk up to him on the street, giggle and say, "I wish you were my doctor." Finally, he left the show. He'll still be evident in episodes shown in America this year.

Robin Nedwell, 26, has now taken Evans' place as first among equals. He very much resembles his character—open, extroverted and boisterous. "There's incredible unity," he says. "We're a clan, instead of individual actors. We have a ball, an absolute bloody ball doing the show. No one gives a damn about professionalism! Everybody is in the spirit."

You hear the same sentiments from everybody connected with the show—with such uniformity that you begin to suspect that they have all learned the same script. But doubt is erased as you watch rehearsals and then the taping before an audience that arrived from schools and factories, by the busloads, as though for a seaside holiday.

After the taping, and after another round of drinks in the LWT bar, a dozen people went out to midnight dinner at a small restaurant in Hampstead, to celebrate Barclay's 31st birthday.

"I love the show," said Ernest Clark across the dinner table. "Mine isn't a bad part; it has a few variations. And I believe the characters are real." Clark, who plays the crotchety and ever-put-upon Professor Loftus, is a highly accomplished veteran actor who looks as though he had been in every second British movie you see on the late show. "I specialize," he grinned, "in playing moderately toffee-nosed gentlemen."

It was certainly no easy matter for Doctor in the House to get onto the American television screen. It almost did not happen. For the walls surrounding United States television are porous enough in one direction to allow our shows to flood out into the world, but have insulated almost completely the American public from foreign productions.

English companies, which had eyed the American market enviously for years, at last saw their opening in recent seasons of such programs as The Forsyte Saga, Civilisation and The Six Wives of Henry VIII, with the success of the BBC specials and the acceptance of personalities like Tom Jones and David Frost.

"If you added up the value of the entire world television market," said London Weekend's international-sales agent Richard Price, "the U.S. would be worth well over 50 per cent. To be frank, that means millions of dollars—or pounds, whatever the exchange rate—a year."

Price and London Weekend decided, on the basis of its acceptance in other countries, to make their American breakthrough with Doctor in the House. "I concluded that the only way to get a British show into America was by hammering on the door until it broke down." For five months, Price spent one week out of every four in the U.S. But he still could not overcome the obstacles. "Programming people in the U.S. had traditionally been worried about the American backwoods. We told them that with an ever-larger number of people moving across the Atlantic, breaking down barriers, there would be more acceptance of English attitudes and accents."

Finally, Price and a colleague packed up two 150-pound portable video-tape machines and flew to Houston in early 1970 for a television sales convention. They invited Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. executives to breakfast the next morning to watch an episode. "8:30 is not an hour when people normally laugh," Price observed dryly. "But they fell out of their chairs." By 9:05, the show had been bought, and Doctor in the House was on its way to America. (END)

Pete Rozelle's friends on the "competition committee" are tinkering with football again. Last March, at the National Football League's winter meeting in Hawaii, the rulesmakers decided to penalize the defense 3 yards, 1 foot, and 9 inches. How's that again?

That's the distance the hash marks* have been moved closer to the middle of the field. Once 20 yards from the sidelines, hash marks now are 23 yards, 1 foot, 9 inches inbounds—or, in direct line with the goal-post uprights.

Ho hum, you say? The rule change seems insignificant. Maybe. But should it have its expected effect, television screens this fall and winter will runneth over with more long scoring plays than the eye of man (or CBS) has seen since zone defenses became popular several years ago. Fans will gurgle with delight once more. Pete Rozelle will breathe a sigh of relief, and so will TV sponsors. After all, what better time to sell beer or razor blades than immediately after Bob Griese has hit Paul Warfield on a hitch-and-go?

Last season NFL quarterbacks threw 25 per cent fewer touchdown passes than in 1967, causing TV sponsors to run more of their commercials after punts. Zone defenses had taken away the "Bomb"—the long scoring pass. Since nothing looks prettier on instant replay than the Bomb, Rozelle's rulesmakers doctored the hash marks.

What effect will such a seemingly or, how Pete Rozelle stopped worrying and learned to love the Bomb

By Hal Higdon

insignificant rules adjustment have on the Bomb? Hank Stram, coach of the Kansas City Chiefs, explains: "What they've done is given us 10 more feet of playing field on the short side. With the ball nearer the middle, the offense can go either way. Teams playing zone defenses rotated toward the strong side of the field. Because of the nearness of the sidelines, they figured teams couldn't do much damage on that side. In effect, they used the sidelines as a fifth defensive back."

"Now that they've given the offense more room on the weak side, quarterbacks can increase their throwing in that area. Field goals also are easier to hit because you're always lined up in front of the goal posts. You don't have to waste a play merely to → obtain better field position."

Stram disapproves of the change, because he feels it "legislates against excellence. These things go in cycles," he says. "Even without rule changes, the offense might have reasserted itself naturally in another few years."

Hank Stram has earned a reputation as an offensive innovator, but he also believes in total balance, and his team was one of the first in pro football to use zones to defend against passes.

In 1960 Stram, a former college assistant, arrived in Dallas to coach the AFL's Texans (now the Kansas City Chiefs) with no pro football experience and thus no preconceptions as to what could and couldn't be done. That year the champion Houston Oilers featured quarterback George Blanda throwing to receivers Charlie Hennigan and Bill Groman. They beat the Texans 20 to 10 midway through the season. "We decided afterwards there was no way we could ask our defensive backs to cover their speedy receivers man-for-man again," recalls Stram. Before the next Houston-Dallas contest, Stram's team switched to a zone defense similar to that used by most colleges. They intercepted three Blanda passes and beat Houston 24 to 0.

Despite that landmark victory, few in pro football believed the zone defense had much of a future. Stram recalls discussing the zone after the season with several NFL coaches. They showed skepticism. Yet, a dozen years later the zone has become the NFL defense. Oddly enough, the one team that probably uses zones the least is Stram's Chiefs, partly because of the ability of all-pro cornerback Jim Mar-salis to play his opponent man-for-man.

Stram doesn't believe that zone defenses should get all the blame (or credit) for low-scoring games. He thinks last season's 100 fewer TD passes may have been a result of better league balance rather than coaching stratagems. "The quality of players on all teams has improved tremendously," he says. "As a result, it is more difficult to do things now than it was four years ago. We had high-scoring games in the early years of the AFL, but not when the top two or three teams played."

Actually Rozelle's rulesmakers enacted a number of new regulations. Punts now may be run out of the end zone. The penalty for grabbing a face mask has been reduced to five yards except in flagrant cases. Offensive penalties behind the line of scrimmage now are marked from the previous line rather than from the point of infraction. Presumably this will help eliminate those seemingly hopeless first-and-47 situations that occasionally develop.

They also ruled that tie games will now count in the standings as a half game won and a half game lost, but they deferred action on other rule changes which sought to reduce the number of tie games or eliminate them. One would have reinstated the two-point conversion. Another would have extended "sudden death" to regular-season games as well as play-offs. Neither change earned the 20 votes necessary for a new rule, but an informal poll of teams found 22 in favor of some anti-tie legislation. More tinkering with the rules can be expected.

Several high school associations already have begun to experiment with tie-breaking variations. This fall Ohio will initiate an overtime rule that permits a series of scoring attempts from the 10-yard line. On the other hand, New York gives each of two tied teams the ball at the 40, hopes for a score, then as a last resort counts yardage. Last year two New York teams battled to a scoreless tie. In the overtime one team marched 40 yards for a touchdown and scored a two-point conversion. Then the other team had its chance from the 40, scored, but missed its conversion! The game ended 8 to 6 and the fans went home limp.

But is the NFL ready for that? END

THE NEW BILL COSBY SHOW

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

As a general rule, if something is called the new something, watch out. There is something wrong, and the chances are it's the same something that was wrong in the old show. In the case of The New Bill Cosby Show, however, don't watch out—just watch. For Mr. C's new show is strictly grade A.

Nonetheless, before we let our general rule go, we believe that there is good reason for said rule not holding in regard to this show. Mr. Cosby's old program, charming as it was, was a situation comedy, and Mr. Cosby played a character in it. A character very much like himself, to be sure, but still a character. Furthermore, he had only a half hour. Most comedians are best in short doses—they are sprinters. A handful are distance runners. Mr. Cosby is something else—he is a marathon man. You don't get tired of him at all. He takes his time, because it's a vital part of his humor, in whatever he does. But he doesn't take too much—his hour-long show doesn't drag a bit. Everything around Mr. Cosby keeps moving—from miniskirts to miniskits. There are even minimonologues. And terrific minisongs, particularly those sung barbershop style; i.e., "The show you are about to see can best be described as the show you are about to see."

The opening episode gave us as guests Sidney Poitier and Harry Belafonte. Not even a token white. It was a very funny show. In one skit Poitier and Belafonte put Mr. Cosby down for the count in an expensive restaurant.

In another Poitier played a truly Mephistophelean tempter to Mr. Cosby's very reluctant temptee. It was a howl. Still, we weren't convinced—after all, almost anybody could come up with a successful show if he had guests who play together as well as Poitier and Belafonte. In the second show, however, when Mr. Cosby had Peter Sellers and Lily Tomlin, more was demanded, and again the show came through, particularly when Mr. Cosby played ancient retainer to Mr. Sellers' fine quartet of ambassadors. In the third show Tim Conway was pleasantly low-keyed, although Anthony Newley was a bit wa-wa—as in "It's a Musical Wa-Wa-World."

But the most remarkable achievement of Cosby's series lies not in its transients but in its permanent residents. While we've grown to like Susan Tolsky, who plays the plain Jane, and mean Oscar Degruy and bandleader Quincy Jones, we were an immediate pushover for two others. One is a charmboat named Lola Falana, who can not only sing and dance, but also can do introductions while doing both of them at once. The other is Foster Brooks, who, playing a hard-drinking CBS executive, welcomed "Bob" Cosby "On be-hic-half of the e-hic-s-hic-utives." Then, on the second show, he told us CBS stood for three things, "Cleanliness, beauty and scissors." And, finally, on the third, he promised to improve service in the commissary—he was going to cut out the hymns. He's a funny man. All in all, a fine way to start a season.

He'll be talking about his book "In Critical Condition: Crisis in America's Health Care" . . . Veteran screen actor PAT O'BRIEN makes one of his rare TV appearances in what should be a juicy "heavy" role: that of a political boss in a Banyon episode, "The Graveyard Vote."

Brush up on your Greek mythology: PIER PAOLO PASOLINI's film "Medea" will be the second in Playhouse New York's series of classics on PBS. MARIA CALLAS has the title role (it's her only film) . . . Another actress has joined the thin ranks of woman directors. She's comedienne NANCY WALKER, who will direct comedy sketches for "Ann-Margret's Fol-lies and Scandals," an NBC special scheduled for Nov. 29.

Last spring, former astronaut WALLY SCHIRRA and several other modern-day adventurers traced the route of John Wesley Powell's 1869 exploration of the Green and Colorado rivers. The expedition was filmed for an Oct. 20 CBS special, "Smithsonian Adventure: 99 Days to Survival" . . . ROBERT CONRAD, starring in Assignment: Vienna on ABC's The Men series, is moonlighting in a theatrical film shooting in Europe. It's called "Find Medford and Kill Him," and like his TV series, it's an adventure yarn full of derring-do.

More on ABC's night of specials, Nov. 15: JACQUES COUSTEAU leads off with a trip to the Arctic Circle for a look at the walrus; BURT BACHARACH is joined by SAMMY DAVIS Jr. and ANTHONY NEWLEY for a musical hour; and ALAN KING has a go at "The Wonderful World of Aggravation" . . . RICHARD WIDMARK plays a hard-nosed New York cop on his new NBC series Madigan, but his producers say they'll be doing location filming in London, Rome, Lisbon and Copenhagen. On a policeman's salary?

LESLIE JOURDAN adds a French accent to that NBC Family Theatre musical Cole Porter in Paris. DIAHANN CARROLL and PERRY COMO are involved in the Jan. 17 offering . . . If you don't get enough soft-rock musicians KENNY ROGERS AND THE FIRST EDITION on the Music Show, PBS is profiling the group on Special of the Week Oct. 16 . . . TV's Partridge Family does some rolling of its own on Oct. 28 and 29 in a Bike-a-Thon for the American Cancer Society. The family is announcing the charity drive on their Oct. 20 show.
